Photography is often said to provide an autonomous context in reality, either through the content of the produced images or the production of reality itself. The exhibition aims to disassociate the production of reality from its original context.

The exhibition by Mette Juul raises the question whether the Catholic Church is in fact more real than the paper on which they are written. These words certify a real than the paper on which they are written. Dreams are more real than any bed. As an artefact of consciousness, they are more real than the memory of consciousness.

As an artefact of consciousness, they are more real than the memory of consciousness. As an artefact of consciousness, they are more real than the memory of consciousness.
